At the Athletic Field, Saturday afternoon, Bethel lost their first game to West Paris. The score was 12-0. They made a better showing the next day at Lovell, where they were beaten 2-1 in a ten inning game. But this is not bad for a group of players who have practiced together but once or twice.

THESE FIGURES MORE THAN STARTLING

It Is All Very Plain Why Our Tax Burden Is So Terrible.

In an address opposing any further concessions with respect to the European war loans due the United States, Senator Robert B. Howell of Nebraska refuted in convincing fashion the insincere cry that comes from across the Atlantic, that Uncle Sam has played the part of a Shylock in connection with these loans.

"The echo of the last gun fired in the great war had scarcely died away," said Senator Howell, "when there was initiated in Europe a project for the cancellation of the war debts due the United States. It penetrated the chancelleries of that continent, it stalked to the peace table, it reached across the Atlantic and clasped hands with our international bankers; it intrigued our trade associations and chambers of commerce, it instituted an all-enveloping propaganda that worked while many of us slept."

"These debts," declared the Nebraska senator, "exceeding twelve billion dollars, were cancelled, the debtor nations agreeing merely to help us out in paying interest on the money we had borrowed to loan them. All they are to pay, taken together, is the equivalent of 2 5-8 per cent interest annually for 62 years on this twelve billion dollars. Then they are through. We must pay the twelve billion without help and also the difference between this 2 5-8 per cent interest and the interest we are paying on the money we borrowed to loan them."

"Our interest charges on this account alone have been averaging $500,000,000 a year, and there is no such thing as a moratorium for us. All that these debtors paid us last year was $235,000,000. This year they were to pay us $247,000,000, less than one-half the interest we must pay, but the moratorium has shifted this $247,000,000 to our shoulders, temporarily at least."

"The net cost to us of carrying these debts from the dates of settlement up to the end of this moratorium, less than eight years as an average, will exceed, interest alone, by more than $2,389,000,000, the total payments of every kind and nature made to us by European debtors. Do you wonder a deficit has overtaken our treasury?"

The total loans made by the United States to Great Britain—nearly two-thirds of which were war-time loans, amounted to $4,715,000,000. In settlement, we agreed to take 3 7/8 per cent interest on the face of the debt for a period of 62 years. Then the state will be considered as having been wiped clean.

Italy's total debt to the United States is $2,155,000,000. In settlement, the Italian government has agreed to pay the United States one and one-eighth per cent interest annually on the face of the debt for 62 years. All that the United States has received on this debt during the past seven years is about $40,000,000. In answer to the question: "Could Italy pay more?" Senator Howell declares: "Last year she expended in armaments $45,000,000 as against $142,000,000 in 1913."

The total of the French debt due to the United States was $4,211,000,000. The basis upon which this debt was settled was that France should pay us two and one-sixth per cent interest annually upon its face for a period of 62 years.

Keeping in mind the reasonable attitude and the generosity of the United States in dealing with its European debtors, Senator Howell is strongly of the opinion that no further concessions should be made and that repudiation would be preferable to a further scaling down of these debts on our part.

A brick dated 1823 was found by Wallace Small of Bowdoin. He was digging in the ground floor of the shed when he uncovered the brick.

WORK ON GREENLEAF'S NEW FUNERAL HOME SHOWS PROGRESS

The modern funeral home of Dr. S. S. Greenleaf, adjoining his residence on Vernon Street recently purchased of Harry Jordan, is nearly completed. The building is 24 x 42 feet and the new work includes two floors and the basement.

On the second floor are the display rooms, beautifully finished and well lighted. The ground floor consists of a large reception room, family room, slumber room, and minister's and bearer's room. Inlaid linoleum is used on both floors, while the walls are finished in buff texture. The reception room faces the north and is lighted by two large plate glass windows.

The basement includes a spacious room for three automobiles and rooms for Dr. Greenleaf's veterinary work, which include the office, drug room and operating room. These rooms are up-to-date in every particular and are a model of convenience.

The residence and funeral home will be heated by a low pressure steam plant. The entire work of alteration and new construction is in charge of H. Alton Bacon, contractor, of Bryant Pond. The electrical work is being done by Guy Morgan, and includes some of the latest and most attractive designs in fixtures as well as every modern convenience in wiring. An electric elevator runs from the basement to the second floor.

The doctor's small animal hospital will be contained in a smaller building nearby. This is one story in height about 20 x 30 feet floor space, and will be heated by a separate plant.

The funeral home and grounds when completed will give Dr. Greenleaf one of the most attractive and efficient places of its kind in the state. The people of Bethel are fortunate in having a man of Dr. Greenleaf's ability and initiative with them and the citizens extend wishes for further success in his venture.

VETERAN R. F. D. CARRIER RETIRED

Charles E. Valentine Made Last Trip On Route 2 Saturday, After 25 Years of Service

As a result of the Economy Act recently passed by Congress, Charles E. Valentine, who has been the carrier on R. F. D. 2 since its establishment on Feb. 1, 1904, completed his duties last Saturday. Clyde Whitman, substitute carrier is now acting in his place.

During the past 28 years many changes have taken place. In 1904, when Mr. Valentine purchased the first car used by a R. F. D. carrier in town, it was necessary to secure a special permit from the Department for its use. This car, a Schacht roadster, served over rough roads of that time for several years, and it was sometime later that others followed in the use of the newer method of travel.

Some years after the route was in operation, it was increased in length several miles by extending beyond the end village on each side of the river and retracing, but this was done only for three or four years. Since then the route has been from Bethel to Glen on the south side of the river and back to the north side.

In March, 1930, Mr. Valentine had reached the retirement age. He was granted an extension of two years, and the Department again did this in March of this year. This second extension was automatically put about by the new law. By this act nine other carriers in Maine were retired and 655 throughout the country.

Mr. Valentine, during these years, has carried on his farm on the north side of the river, although since 1914, West Paris High School, east of the river, has been on Mechanic Street in Bethel village.

CANNONBALL BAKER DIRORE AUTO RECORD CLIMBING MT. WASHINGTON LAST WEEK

Cannonball Baker, in an eight cylinder Graham owned by Robert A. Graham, Jr., of the Graham Company, beat the former record of climbing Mount Washington by 57 seconds on Tuesday afternoon. He made the eight mile climb from the Glen House to the summit in 15 minutes and 25 seconds. Mr. Baker has climbed Mt. Washington several times and claims that the chief reason for this new record is the excellent condition of the carriage road.

DR. CHAPMAN TO LEAD LARGE CHORUS

Thousands expected to flock to the Eastern Maine Music Camp

Plans are well under way for the big Chapman Day concert which will be held at the Eastern Music Camp on the shores of Lake Umbagog, Saturday, July 23.

Dr. William R. Chapman of Bethel and New York has interested himself in the scholarship fund and the concert is being given to provide funds for students who have talent but cannot afford to attend the camp.

Rehearsals are now being held in various cities and towns in the State and when Dr. Chapman takes up his position in the wonderful "Pew" those present will get a thrill not experienced since the close of the Maine Festivals.

The chorus will consist of nearly 500 voices and there will be 125 or more musicians in the orchestra. Tickets are now being sold in various Maine cities and towns. Each city or town is to have the full quota of tickets sold credited for a scholarship fund that city or town. Camp officials are making plans for taking care of 10,000 persons on the day of the concert, which will be the big day of the year at the camp.

A rehearsal of the chorus and orchestra will be held at 11 o'clock followed by a picnic luncheon at 1 o'clock. The concert will be given at three o'clock. If the day should prove stormy, the concert will be postponed one week. Committees in various centers are arranging special trips for those who wish to attend.

Assisting in the program will be distinguished artists from New York and Boston as well as Maine favorites. They are to give their service. Their names will be made public as soon as the program has been completed.

The picnic luncheon will be held in the hall with the guests of honor and speakers seated on the platform affording all an equal opportunity to see and hear what takes place.

The BLACK BOX OF SILENCE

By Francis Lynde

AN unusual, exciting, interesting holding story in which the author has taken a modern invention as the "hub" of his narrative and done a brilliant bit of story telling. From the opening when Owen Larkin, designer of the "Black Box of Silence," dreamer and enthusiast, reveals his secret and his fears as to what ignoble usage his invention may be put to, until the cleverly worked out and altogether satisfactory ending, even the most exacting reader will be led to a pleasurable excess on action, climaxes and entertaining dialogue. With it all there is an appealing love story.

This story of exceptional merit will appear serially in these columns. It means a real treat for our readers, and we urge all to read it.

Imaginary Ill Health

Refuge from Boredom?
It is a curious fact that there are more health pessimists among the well-to-do than among the poor and among those who work hard for a good living. Ruth P. Wadsworth, M. D., remarks in Miller's Weekly. You need time and money and an otherwise care-free mind to worry about what is going to happen to your health next.

The wage-earner has a certain amount of indefinite dread of illness at the back of his mind because he knows illness is expensive and disabling. But it never occurs to him to read medical treatises in order that he may think up some interesting disease which may hit him.

I sometimes think persons turn to the possibility of disease as a refuge from boredom. At first the idea is a fascinating one, but suddenly they are held by their own petard. The idea becomes an obsession and they really feel sick.

Living becomes an expensive affair. They go to the limit of the specialists and sanitarians, trying to find some one who will give them a positive and clear diagnosis. Often an unnecessary operation will effect a cure. Any operation is painful enough to jolt one out of imaginary ill.

Camel Compels Tribute

From Desert Traveler

Unusually, perhaps, all nature's brutes are cruel, but what the lion's paw means to the rabbit, and the only one capable of existing in a wilderness of thorns, is sand and relief.

You have come to feel the slightest affliction that is a relief. But after a while the lion's paw is a relief, a country that would be a beautiful home in a desert and a rough ride in the sand, you are bound to find your camel's back a relief. It is a relief to find a camel's back a relief.

You have come to feel the slightest affliction that is a relief. But after a while the lion's paw is a relief, a country that would be a beautiful home in a desert and a rough ride in the sand, you are bound to find your camel's back a relief. It is a relief to find a camel's back a relief.

The Penny in Medicine

A pharmacist, whose face is a study for people, told me that, once upon a time, all doctors were called "penny." The plants they used as medicine were called "penny." It is all because the penny was the first medical plant known. The doctor, he went on, had a high regard for the common garden variety of penny as an antispasmodic. Monks, to this day, have a habit of using the root of the penny plant in the treatment of the stomach. The penny plant is the only one in the world that grows in the sand. It is the only one in the world that grows in the sand. It is the only one in the world that grows in the sand.

House Ventilation

While at home, a wife presides over the household, and it is her duty to see that the house is properly ventilated. The house is a place where the family live, and it is important that it be kept healthy. The house is a place where the family live, and it is important that it be kept healthy. Early Encyclopedias

Mr. "Natural History" was one of the encyclopedias of antiquity. It retained its popularity through the Middle Ages and was the source of much information in medieval compilations, one of which was the "Etymologies" of Isidore of Seville. Two centuries later, Johannes Maerius published his "Concerning the Universe," which was largely a continuation of Isidore. The greatest of medieval encyclopedias was the "Speculum Majus" of Vincent of Beauvais, which contained a vast amount of information on all subjects.

No Solvent for Wood

The United States Forest Service laboratory says that there is no general solvent for wood. The fact that wood is composed of many materials, all of which have different properties, makes it impossible to find a single solvent that will dissolve all of them. The laboratory has found that the only way to dissolve wood is to use a mixture of solvents.

Determining Truth

"Truth" wrote the late Sir William James. "It is more likely to come out of error, if it is clear and definite, than out of confusion, and the experience teaches us that it is better to hold a well-understood and intelligible opinion, even if it should turn out to be wrong, than to be content with a muddled-headed mixture of conflicting views, sometimes called 'impartiality,' and often no better than an opinion at all."

TWO-MINUTE SERMON

JUSTICE

Death strips the rich man of his purple and fine linen, and the pauper of the rags which have disguised him, and it places both in the white light of truth. Never mind outward circumstances; they don't count one way or the other. Don't imagine that your poverty is in your favor, or that wealth will influence the decision of the final Judge. You can neither win heaven with a plea of poverty nor buy it with riches. What have you? What are you? The last question is the one that must be answered. However, if poverty is not in our favor, neither is it against us. Extreme poverty is against a man in nearly everything relating to this life. I don't care what you want—even if it is merely a fair chance and a square deal—poverty is against you. But it does not count with God. The winds of adversity may sweep down upon me and scatter everything that I have gathered around me, and leave me as stark as a tree in winter, but that will place me at no disadvantage before God.

CHICKS HAVE RIGHT TO PROPER START

Therefore, Give Attention to "Hatching" Eggs.

Successful Colorado poultrymen who produce eggs for hatching find that it pays to give close attention to (1) the condition and care of the breeding flock, and (2) proper care of hatching eggs before they are set.

More farmers and poultrymen than ever are hatching their own chicks with setting hens—the good old fashioned method—reports O. C. Utford, extension poultryman at the Colorado Agricultural College.

"The breeding flock from which hatching eggs are being produced," says Utford, "should be carefully selected to eliminate hens that are too fat, lack vigor or health, or have serious defects of type and color.

"Bacillary white diarrhea, a serious disease of young chicks, comes from hens in the breeding flock that are affected," he adds. "It is not possible to recognize such hens except by blood testing the individual birds."

Green feed and sunshine supply vitamins that are needed for normal health and growth of chicks. It is pointed out. The baby chicks first makes use of vitamins when it is developing in the egg, but the egg will not contain these important elements unless the breeding flock is fed a ration that supplies them. Therefore the flock should have plenty of sunshine and a well-balanced ration that includes green feeds, minerals and water.

Losses Sure When the

Chicks Are Overcrowded

Crowding always results in enormous losses and occurs just prior to the chicks taking to the roost. It may be discouraged by maintaining heat but eventually the chicks will take to the corners. It might be ideal but impractical to construct a round brooder house, but one can eliminate the corners in a house with square corners. A scheme of this kind consists of inclined wire netting frames about 2 feet wide placed in the back and sides of the house. The inner edge is next to the floor while the outer is elevated about a foot from the floor. It is, of course, necessary that these frames fit tight so that it is impossible for chicks to get underneath. With this arrangement as the chicks crowd out they are elevated and there is no danger of the chicks being suffocated. Usually small roosts are nailed on the upper side of the frame and it is only a short time until the chicks are roosting. The old idea was that too early roosting caused crooked breast bones, but that idea has been exploded so that now the advice is to get the chicks roosting as soon as possible.—Missouri Farmer.

Estimating Oil Need

Five hundred chicks kept in confinement for the first four weeks will eat about 200 pounds of mash and will need four pounds or two quarts of cod liver oil. The same number of chicks will consume close to 500 pounds of mash the first eight weeks and, if confined, will need two and one-half gallons of cod liver oil. From this one can estimate the amount of oil that will be needed and can make the purchase and have it ready when the chicks are hatched. Cod liver oil may be secured from the local drugist, or the county agent or farm demonstration flock cooperators in the county can supply the names of companies that sell the cod liver oil.

Brooder-House Litter

Ground corn cobs make satisfactory litter for brooder houses, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. Two coarsely ground cobs make as good a litter as chopped hay or straw. Some poultrymen prefer to use commercial litters. Sand does not make a good floor covering unless the chicks are well fed all of the time. Chicks placed on sand sometimes fill up on it producing indigestion and other unsatisfactory results.

Graded Eggs Sell Best

The average per capita consumption of eggs in Canada is 33, nearly an egg a day for every person, and the highest consumption of any country. Canadian officials credit this to the fact that eggs are carefully graded, and that the Canadian housewife goes to market and buys eggs with confidence. She knows that eggs graded as extras are of the highest quality and can be used for any purpose in the home. Every egg passing into trade in that country is graded.—Prairie Farmer.

ROADSIDE STAND PROPRIETORS MAY GROW OWN ADVERTISING

Owners of roadside stands in Maine can create permanent and effective advertising for their place of business by improving or planting an adjacent grove of trees, believes A. D. Nutting, extension forestry specialist.

In fact, he says, many owners of roadside stands may grow their own advertising by giving nature a chance. What advertising, he asks, can be more effective than that which causes comment about the beauty of the location. "I bought these eggs and berries at Smith's stand, which is there by that majestic grove of trees just around the bend below town." This, Mrs. Nutting says, is typical of comments consumers make.

This form of advertising—though cheap and effective—enhances Maine's chief asset, beauty.

ROOSTER TRIED FOR LAYING AN EGG

Kentucky Court's Recent Exile of Dog Finds Many Precedents in History

While the action of Judge Evans of Winchester, Kentucky, in sentencing to exile from the State for life of "Old King," blooded foxhound, who was tried on a charge of the murder of several sheep, was an unusual occurrence there are precedents for such a trial. There is scarcely a law court in Continental Europe that has not, somewhere in its dusty archives, the record of a similar case.

There was the trial of the rooster at Basle in 1474, for instance. Now this rooster was accused of a most singular crime. It was nothing less than laying an egg. This, the prosecuting counsel may well have pointed out was a distinct usurpation of the rights of the feminine member of the family.

But the real significance, what made the act so dastardly, was that roosters eggs were used, as any man might have told you, in the dark and mysterious practices of the alchemist. They were employed in every magical concoction of any standing. The Basle rooster, accordingly, was burned at the stake. The egg suffered a like fate. The law was equally severe in the case of a sow tried at Lavigny, France in 1457, for the murder of a child. But her litter of six pigs was freed. Defending counsel pleaded first offence, youth and innocence to good effect. Manifestoes and proclamations against the rodents that infested Italian cities of the period frequently resulted in a voluntary exodus on the part of the rats to the sea, historians solemnly assure us.

But it is in the account of Maffei, the Jesuit historian, of the trip of a Portuguese ship to Brazil that our admiration for the efficacy of old practices reaches its summit. Maffei declares that when a whale appears off the port bow the crew, prayers and imprecations having failed to drive the monster off, was called to sit as a court. The whale was summoned, accused, found guilty of obstructing the vessel's course and the sentence was read to him. The catacan culprit immediately and obligingly submerged and was not seen again during the voyage.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

MAINE EGG LAYING CONTEST

Poultrymen wishing to enter a pen of birds in the Third Maine Egg Laying Contest at Highmoor Farm, Monmouth, should write to H. M. Tucker, Supervisor of Contest, Augusta, Maine, on or before August 15. Application blanks are furnished. Two Oxford County poultrymen have made good showings in the contest the last two years; A. J. Dyer, Norway—Rhode Island Reds; and Merle Adams, East Sumner, with his Barred Rocks.

The new H. D. A., Miss Ada Brewster, began work on July first. The first few days were spent at the State Extension Office at Orono, studying the Oxford County Program with Miss Nason, the State Leader, and the subject matter specialists. She is now at the Farm Bureau Office in South Paris. Several women have already asked for her assistance in planning changes in the arrangement of their homes. Two others have come for advice in the feeding of their young children.

Plans are underway for the series of committee planning meetings which are to be held in each community within the next two months. In each organized group the chairman, secretary and the project leaders for food, clothing and home management, will meet with the agent to discuss plans for next year.

Last year the following communities had 100% attendance at the committee planning meetings: Andover, Bethel, Buckfield, Canton, East Bethel, East Fryeburg, Fryeburg, Peru, Union, Waterville, and Woodstock.

The first meeting is scheduled for Norway on July 22 at 10 A. M. at the home of Mrs. Libby. Mrs. Edith Greenleaf is the chairman of the Norway group. The same afternoon the So. Paris group will meet at 2 P. M. at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Hattie Millet. Miss Estelle Nason, who is in charge of all the Home Demonstration Agents in the state will attend both of these meetings.

Other committee planning meetings scheduled for July are: Dixfield—Mon., July 25 at 2 P. M. with Mrs. Brown. Rumford—Tues., July 26 at 10 A. M. at Community Hall. North Rumford—Tues., July 26 at 1:30 P. M. with Mrs. Ellrich. Roxbury—Wed., July 27 at 1:30 P. M. with Mrs. Shaw. Mexico—Wed., July 27 at 1:30 P. M. at Baptist Vestry. Andover—Thurs., July 28 at 10 A. M. with Miss Talbot. Woodstock—Thurs., July 28 at 2 P. M. at Bryant Pond. Bethel—Friday, July 29 at 10 A. M. at the Grange Hall.

COTTON NECKWEAR IS NOW STYLISH

"Cotton neckwear is more fashionable now than for a long time," says Helen Spaulding, clothing specialist for the Extension Service. She continues:

"Along with the tendency to cut dresses with necklines closer to the base of the throat comes the finishing of neck openings with light collars. The white accent may be no more than an organdie bow fastened at that point on the edge of the neck opening where it will do its wearer the most good. Of course, this type of neckwear is often used on dresses of solid color and most frequently on navy or black.

"Colors, cuffs, and belts go in sets made of organdie, pique, linen or lawn. Some quite new collars simulate bibs and button on over the dress. These are very useful in transforming a dress with a neck opening too wide or too deep for fashion.

"A plain V-neck opening may be transformed with a scarf to simulate the much liked cowl drapery. For this, the draped scarf is triangular and tied with the bias cut side toward the neck."

JUST A TALK BY D. S. BROOKS

THE OLD RUGGED CROSS!

Text: "Whoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Mark 8:34.

I have often asked myself the question, "What are we in this world for, anyhow? Is it to be puffed and pampered? Are some to take their lives away, while red-blooded men and women bear the burdens of the day? Do some have no better business than to let themselves up as critics to pull down what the constructive workers are seeking to build up. One thing is certain, nothing less than a one hundred per cent man will touch "The Old Rugged Cross," and carry it for Jesus up to Mt. Calvary.

Even the cross-bearers have various views in matters of theology. Some set forth one opinion, and others a different idea, altogether. An improper feeling takes full possession of the mind, giving me great comfort and courage that Jesus is already here upon earth, in his "second coming." After he has completed his work we may look for our deceased loved ones to be restored to us. I do not think the angel meant to infer that Christ's second coming must take place in a literal sense. I think rather it was to be understood as a symbolical one. There has been a period of darkness in the world, but now the light is coming. The sun has been in the sky for many years. The light is coming. The sun has been in the sky for many years. The light is coming.

The "Old Rugged Cross" is more than a mere symbol. It is a reminder of the world. It is a reminder of the world. It is a reminder of the world.

I found that the patient's messenger was the one who was responsible for the patient's comfort and happiness.
I found that the patient's messenger

I found that the patient's messenger

individual states—their history, scenic beauty, industries and people.

WHY BOYS NEED SCOUTING

I. Vigorous Physical Life.

Modern society has not made a place for the correct physical training of all its young people. The growing boy depends largely upon his family, church, school, play companions, and organizations such as Scouting, to supply the right physical training.
The family, unless it has a large amount of leisure to devote to it, is deserting in giving physical training.
The church itself assumes more the role of guidance and advice but enters too little into the field of supervised play. Among the ages of 12-15 the school does not give but a small share of its time toward corrective physical training. Play companions without any definite motive constitute dangerous breeding grounds for mischief.
But it is organizations like the Boy Scouts which are really providing a much needed directive physical life to the boys of a community.

When a boy's attention and interest is focused on some definite phase of endurance, which calls into play all his physical powers every day, and when the material which he is working on gives him mastery over self, it is no small wonder that boys find Scouting worthwhile. The providing of a vigorous physical life of the right type when the boy needs it, is a major reason why boys need Scouting.

The Boy Scout Carnival to be held on the Athletic Field, Monday, July 25 at 1:00 P. M., will provide an opportunity for the people of Bethel to witness the local troop in various games, signalling, bandaging, and application of principles of First Aid.

Please notice that the above date is one week later than first scheduled.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

One of the things apartment dwellers of New York miss most is an attic. When we were young, every family had an attic and a cellar and some had a porch as well. Much that came from the front door progressed slowly to the rear. There were people who made a pretense of cleaning the attic every spring, but it was full, a storehouse of mementos and history. There you could find things which had belonged to your grandfather and grandmother, to your parents, to your uncles, aunts and cousins, and things which nobody definitely could place, either for use or ownership. Usually the attic was covered, but frequently there were places where no boards had been laid, and it was fun for boys to walk the catwalks. Occasionally an accident happened, as, for example, the time Julian's foot slipped and he went through the plaster up to his hip. Some of the McWilliams family were extremely startled to see a human leg poking through the ceiling above the hall well.

But there is no such thing as an attic for those who live in New York apartments. If you are so drugged by the scent of flowers in the fields where housewives tell you an antique chest, so ancient that it still has fresh sawdust in all the seams, you cannot, when you get it back to the United States, just put it in the attic and forget about it. No, indeed. You put it in the foyer or the hall, which is narrow enough anyhow, where it is convenient to run into it in the dark. And, if that relative whom friends always said should have been a painter, gives you the picture copied from one in the Louvre, you cannot put it in an attic, with a fair chance of getting it down in time in case the relative comes to visit. No, you have to hang the thing on a wall never intended for pictures anyhow, because that is the only place where there is room for it. The closets naturally are filled with folding bedsteads, old magazines, cameras, score cards, empty suitcases, clothes and shoes. There certainly is no room for anything on the tables or mantelpieces, except for those ash trays piled up in various parts of the world, the bronze and ivory elephants, crystal balls with figures in them and snow globes which fly when the globes are shaken, cigarette boxes, and the few little knickknacks brought by friends from China, Japan, Paris, London, Mexico, Sweden and Atlantic City. To order with the cute little carvings of the wounded lion we purchased in Florence, and the book ends from Florence. There is also, to be sure, the iron gondola match safe from Venice, and the paperweight from the Empire State tower. And there they stay. There is no attic to which they can progress.

You could give those things away except for the fact that no charitable association would take them and you don't like to give them to anyone you know. What is the use of making excuses? You might, if you were in the country, pile them in some meadow, but there you would have an attic which would be the natural receptacle. If you tried to pile them outside in the city, they probably would arrest you for littering the street, conspiracy against the street cleaners, disorderly conduct, obstructing traffic, and driving without a license.

I can well remember once exploring in the attic of my childhood and finding a box and some arrows. It was no Indian bow, but a relic of the interest in archery of some modern. And would that bow shoot! Even in my inexperienced hands it drove an arrow right through the board of a cowshed belonging to a neighbor. I certainly had no thought that a cow could be felled against the inside of that wall. I never could quite decide which carried on worse, the cow or the neighbor.
